Behold!

indra –
Lord of celestials, wearing pure golden garments and adorned with ornaments –

proceeded wondering whether it is possible to attain such a privilege of beholding the service of the Lord hari in the inner recess to one’s heart’s content;

proceeded wondering whether it is possible for anyone to attain such a privilege of - performing such a loving service singing excellent songs in praise of Lord hari; worshipping Lord hari beseeching to one’s heart’s content and singing that ‘today my austerities have fructified’; and beholding Lord SrI rAma – well-praised by tyAgarAja – as the Moon Faced Lord, shining with beautiful sItA, is worshipped by prahlAda.

Notes –

Variations –

Comments –

¹ – kanulAra antarangamunanu – these two words seem to be mutually contradictory. Therefore, 'kanulAra' has been translated as 'to one's heart's content', rather than 'to the satiation of one's eyes'.

General – Anupallavi describes indra witnessing prahlAda performing service to the Lord; the three caraNas describe the actual service by prahlAda.

This kRti forms part of dance-drama 'prahlAda bhakti vijayaM'. In this kRti, indrA is depicted as proceeding to witness the worship of Lord hari by prahlAda.
